ner, the young girl's request was refused. Then she turned hopelessly away.

Sadie Tyler, of 201 East Seventieth street, was standing at the corner of Sixty-third street and Third avenue when the woman with her babe came along. Miss Tyler is of a sympathetic nature, and when the young mother asked her to hold her child a few moments she readily consented to do so. The woman then turned away saying she would be back soon.

Miss Tyler waited but the woman never came back. When nearly an hour had elapsed she became alarmed and started on a run to the Foundling Asylum. The officials who a short time before had refused to take the infant, changed their minds then, and the baby was given a home.

All the infant had on was a white dress upon which was stamped the words, "City Hospital No. 10, Females."

It had evidently only just been taken out of that institution.

The police are looking for its mother.

Thus Any One Can Remember.

Justice Ryan said this morning that to-day's docket in the Tombs Police Court was the smallest in the history While there, she met Taylor, and aldughter was educated in New England. While there, she met Taylor, and all the recollection of his associated justices ran back.

There were three plain drunks, two unlicensed peddiers and one man charged with selling indecent pictures on the blotter.

The drunks were fined $5 each, the peddiers discharged with a warning and the picture vender held to the Grand Jury in $399.

This is no business at all for the court, and old polisemen that have been in the building for many years do not recall when there was so small a grist.

The offensive picture dealer was Louis Cathomen, who was arrested by Anthony Comstock peddling his wares on $18th avenue near the Jefferson Market Court yesterday.
